

Mining

- ⓐ Safe working environments are non-negotiable
- ⓑ Only the best SHEQ scores are good enough

State of play

The mining sector has in recent years come under increasing pressure to upgrade and enforce the most stringent safety measures. A culture has evolved in which the highest safety standards are a way of life on the mines.

Ensuring the safety of all personnel on the mine is not enough. The suppliers and contactors that visit the mine every day are obliged to embrace the principles of safety, too.

Logistics and supply chain innovation

Strategically: We embraced the quest to achieve the highest possible SHEQ (Safety, Health, Environment and Quality) and BBBEE scores some years ago. Today, we continue to innovate new ways in which to improve service levels.

Cargo Carriers has its origins in the mining sector. Today we are one of the top logistics service providers in terms of SHEQ scores. We have a well-developed business with the capacity and track record to extend business relationships in the industry.

Beyond the non-negotiable of high safety standards, we combine our innovative solution skills with proactive technical capability. We offer flexible, custom-built solutions and thereby generate greater value in the supply chain.

Our sound financial position allows us to invest in our client's supply chains even during difficult times, and yields advantage to the partnerships between our clients and ourselves.

Operationally: The training and re-training of our drivers, held at our multimillion-rand training centre in Sasolburg, has helped us to develop world-class bulk vehicle operators.

In the event of a road spill or spillage at the loading or offloading point, Cargo Carriers has a national agreement in place to handle containment, clean-up and rehabilitation if required.

Renewal and regeneration of our fleet has decreased the amount of fuel we utilise, which means less downtime and maintenance and lower overall cost – the value of which we pass on to our clients.

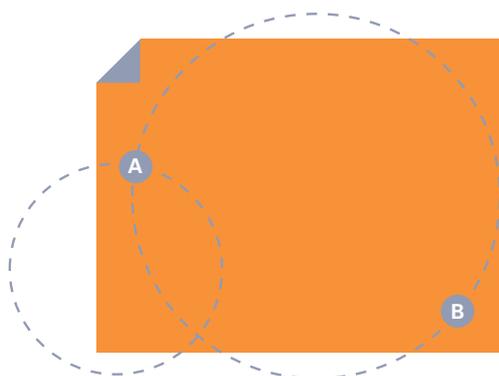

Our new vehicles not only reduce the impact of fuel price increases, but also benefit the environment through less emissions.
